

Angels of Love

Knitters from Belper, England, have given a “gift of love” to the town. They crafted over two thousand crocheted angels to decorate the streets.

To help spread kindness, the knitters attached labels, encouraging the public to take the angels home.

Anne Clark, the brains behind the project, said, “I don’t know where all of the angels have come from. People have just passed around the knitting pattern and it’s grown and grown. I initially got 750 labels made, but had to keep going back for more. It’s amazing.”

She added, “It is a good way to promote the true meaning of Christmas and God’s gift to the world. I hope that these angels will bring back some of the wonder and joy that can so often be missing at this time of year.”
